

A database memorial for victims of police violence.

Since 2015, the Washington Post has kept a list of every fatal shooting by a police officer in the line of duty. As of last time I pulled the data, 6,211 people have been shot.

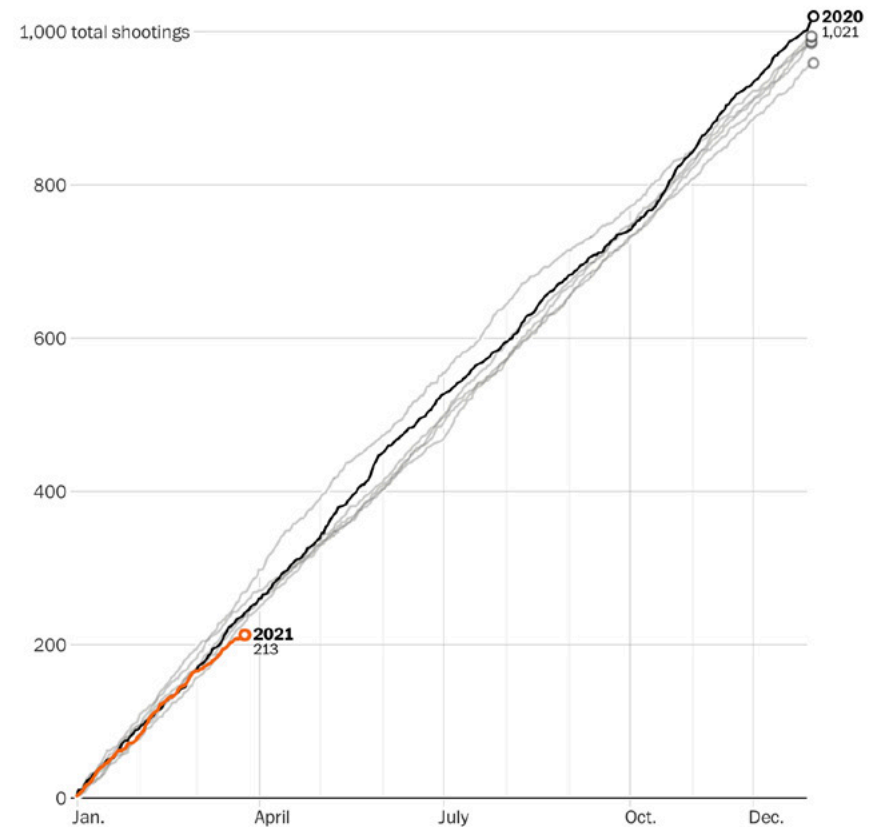

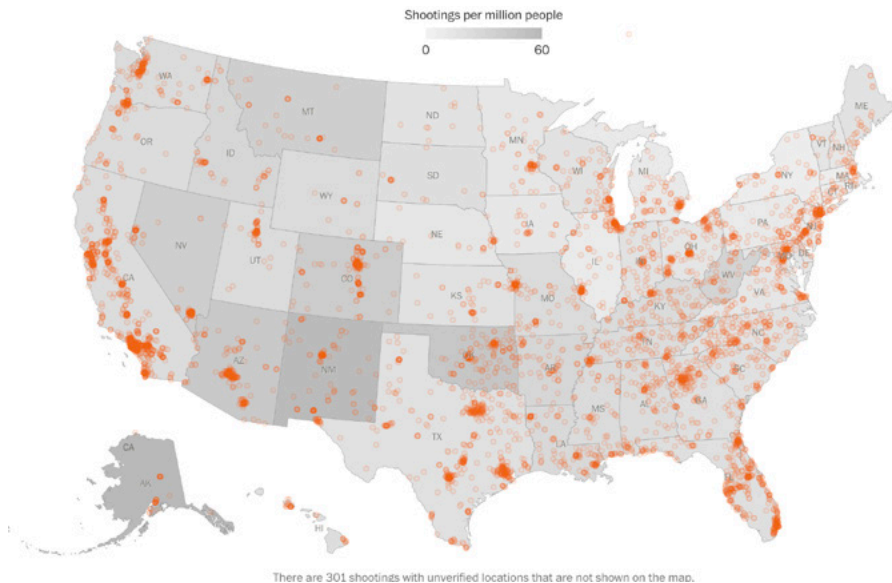

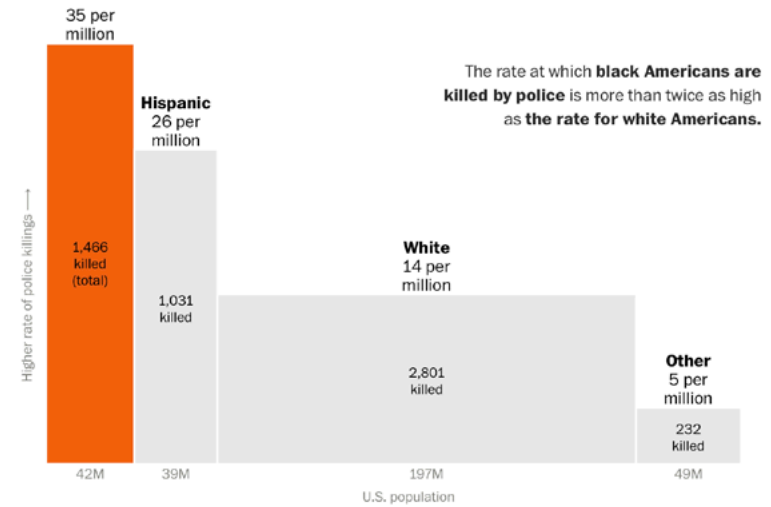

They track the following information—

- The name, age, location, and race of the deceased.
- The circumstances of the shooting, such as whether the person was armed, attempted to flee, or showed signs of a mental health episode.
- Whether the officer used a body camera.

The data is made available through a CSV file in a GitHub repository.

This data is used on their site to map out the problem as a whole, showcasing the nature of police brutality on a macro scale.

I want to show the individual.

I made a few prototypes:
